SAM NEWHOUSE, REPORTER

Mourning and anger has come in the wake of Saturday's horrific mass shooting at Tree of Life synagogue in Pittsburgh's Squirrel Hill neighborhood, claiming the lives of 11 Jews attending Shabbat services, with six wounded including four police officers. Shooter Robert Bowers was wounded and is in custody awaiting trial, while the social media website to which he posted deranged messages before the shooting was taken offline and is under investigation by state authorities. President Donald Trump is planning to visit the synagogue on Tuesday to express his condolences, but some members of the community have told him to stay away, blaming his rhetoric for the mass murder. TRUMP TO DEPLOY OVER
5,200 TROOPS TO BORDER

The United States said on Monday it will send over 5,200 troops to help secure the border with Mexico, a far larger-than-expected deployment as President Donald Trump hardens his stance on immigration ahead of Nov. 6 midterm elections. The deployment will create an active-duty force comparable in size to the U.S. military contingent in Iraq, as Trump's administration draws attention to a caravan of migrants that is trekking through Mexico toward the United States. General Terrence O'Shaughnessy, the head of U.S. Northern Command, said 800 U.S. troops were already en route to the Texas border and more were headed to the borders in California and Arizona. "That is just the start of this operation. We will continue to adjust the number and inform you of those," O'Shaughnessy said. He said some soldiers would be armed although it was unclear who, beyond U.S. military police, might need those weapons. U.S. officials have stressed that the troops would not be involved in policing the border and instead carry out support roles like building tents and barricades, and flying U.S. customs personnel to locations along the border.

ASSANGE SAYS ECUADOR
SEEKING TO END ASYLUM

WikiLeaks founder Julian Assange said on Monday that Ecuador is seeking to end his asylum in its London embassy and hand him over to the United States, but a judge rejected his lawsuit over embassy living conditions. Assange spoke from the embassy via teleconference at a hearing in Quito of a lawsuit challenging the Ecuadorian government requiring him to pay for medical bills, phone calls and clean up after his pet cat. He took refuge in the embassy six years ago to avoid extradition to Sweden in a sexual assault case that was later dropped. He remains there to avoid being jailed by Great Britain for violating the terms of his bail, which he has said would result in his being handed over to Washington. During the hearing, Assange said the new rules were a sign Ecuador was trying to push him out, and said Ecuadorian President Lenin Moreno had already decided to end his asylum but had not yet officially given the order. "If Mr. Assange wants to stay and he follows the rules ... he can stay at the embassy as long as he wants," said Attorney General Inigo Salvador, adding that Assange's stay had cost the country $6 million.

ELON MUSK: 'I'M NOW
THE NOTHING OF TESLA'

Tesla Inc. Chief Executive Officer Elon Musk took to Twitter on Monday, saying he deleted his Tesla titles last week to see what would happen, without giving further details. "Deleted my Tesla titles last week to see what would happen. I'm now the Nothing of Tesla. Seems fine so far," Musk said on Twitter. Tesla did not immediately respond to a request for comment. While Musk is referred to as chief executive in Tesla's investor relations web page, his biography page on the company website has no designation. The biography page had earlier referred to Musk as chairman, product architect and CEO. Musk has agreed to pay a $20 million fine and step aside as Tesla's chairman for three years to settle charges with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission related to his Aug. 7 tweet about taking Tesla private. Musk's compulsive tweeting and erratic behavior, which included smoking marijuana during a video interview, has raised concerns about his leadership, with several Wall Street analysts and some investors urging Tesla to appoint a strong second-in-command.

PIRATES SEIZE POLISH
CREW OFF NIGERIA COAST

Pirates boarded a container ship off the coast of Nigeria, seizing 11 crew including eight from Poland, the vessel's management firm and Polish state media reported. The attackers struck the MV Pomerania Sky, bound for the Nigerian port of Onne, early on Saturday and abducted 11 of the crew, Midocean (IOM) Ltd said in a statement on Sunday. The firm added that nine others remained on board and were unharmed. "Our priority is securing the earliest release of the 11 crew who have been taken and we are working closely with our partners and the local authorities to achieve that," Midocean said. "The families of those crew members taken are being kept informed of the situation," said the company. It added the vessel had proceeded to safe waters. A Nigerian navy spokesman said they had begun an investigation and search and rescue operation as soon as the incident was reported, and would provide an update soon. Midocean declined to say where the kidnapped crew members were from, but Polish state media, citing Foreign Minister Jacek Czaputowicz, said eight of them were from Poland.

Mail bomb suspect appears in court as new package intercepted

A suspicious package addressed to CNN's Atlanta headquarters was intercepted.

The man accused of mailing 14 pipe bombs to prominent critics of President Donald Trump was ordered held without bail on Monday as the FBI confirmed a similar suspicious package addressed to CNN had been intercepted.

Sayoc, his salt-and-pepper hair pulled back into a ponytail, remained largely silent, only acknowledging Judge Edwin Torres' reading of the charges against him.

Shackled and wearing a beige jumpsuit, the 56-year-old man began to tear up, and the three attorneys with him stood shoulder to shoulder to obscure news reporters' and photographers' view of him.

and photographers' view of him.

Sayoc was scheduled to appear in court in Miami again on Friday morning.

The former male stripper and part-time pizza deliveryman is charged with five felony counts: interstate transportation and illegal mailing of explosives, threatening a former president, making threatening interstate communications and assaulting federal officers.

In Atlanta, the FBI confirmed that a suspicious package addressed to CNN's headquarters there had been intercepted.

News of that latest package surfaced with just over a week to go in highly charged political campaigns across the nation leading up to Nov. 6 elections, in which Democrats are battling to seize control of a Congress now held by Trump's Republican Party.

Tensions prompted by the pipe bombs ratcheted up even further after a gunman opened fire at a Pittsburgh synagogue on Saturday, killing 11 worshipers while yelling "All Jews must die."

Last week's bombs were sent to a range of prominent Democrats, including former President Barack Obama, and other targets of Trump's scorn, including CNN.

Sayoc's case is expected to be moved to New York, where he will be prosecuted by the U.S. Attorney's Office there, officials said.

A public defender listed as Sayoc's attorney of record in New York, Sarah Baumgartel, did not respond to requests for comment. REUTERS

Pittsburgh synagogue massacre suspect held without bond

The president and first lady will travel to Pennsylvania to pay respects to the 11 murdered.

Shackled and in a wheelchair, the man accused of shooting 11 worshippers to death at a Pittsburgh synagogue made a stony-faced and largely silent appearance on Monday in a federal courtroom, where he was ordered held without bond for the deadliest attack ever on America's Jewish community.

Robert Bowers, 46, who was wounded in a gunfight with police at the synagogue on Saturday, acknowledged the 29 charges against him, which could lead to his execution if found guilty.

Bowers, who has a history of posting anti-Semitic material online, will get a court-appointed attorney and was remanded to custody of U.S. Marshals. His next hearing is set for Thursday.

"Robert Bowers murdered 11 people who were exercising their religious beliefs," U.S. Attorney Scott Brady said after the arraignment, adding that a grand jury would hear details of the crime within 30 days.

The synagogue massacre has heightened debate over the rhetoric President Donald Trump uses, with critics saying it has encouraged right-wing extremism, which the administration rejects. But a group of Jewish leaders told Trump in an open letter that he was "not welcome in Pittsburgh until you fully denounce white nationalism."

"Robert Bowers murdered 11 people who were exercising their religious beliefs."

Scott Brady,
U.S. attorney

Despite that, Trump and his wife, Melania, will travel to Pennsylvania on Tuesday to "express the support of the American people and grieve with the Pittsburgh community," White House press secretary Sarah Sanders said at a briefing.

Bowers' arraignment was marked by a heavy security presence that included police officers with dogs and a team of sharpshooters at the federal court in Pittsburgh.

Wearing a blue sweatshirt, gray sweatpants, sandals and white socks, with a crewcut and bald spot, Bowers remained expressionless throughout the short hearing.

The charges against him include violation of U.S. civil rights laws in what federal prosecutors say was a hate crime.

Bowers only spoke during the hearing to give his name, state charges against him and to say that he lacked the funds to pay for an attorney to represent him.

He spoke in a calm voice and signed the papers handed to him with a steady hand.

Only at the end of the hearing, when he was wheeled out of the courtroom, did Bowers appear unsettled, turning his head in apparent confusion. REUTERS

Doctors Urge Knee Pain Sufferers

“Don’t Get ANY Surgery Until You See This...”

After Years Of Intense Study, NYC Medical Clinic Finally Reveals It’s Best “Treatment Formula” For Helping Knee Arthritis Sufferers... Especially When So Many Other Treatments Have Failed

NEW YORK CITY - If you are even remotely interested in discovering how the latest scientific discoveries can possibly help your knee pain... then this is going to be the most exciting information you ever read.

Here is why: Knee pain can not only be brutal... it’s complex. In other words, it’s not a simple, easy fix.

But I’m sure you already know that. Or you wouldn’t be reading this.

That’s the bad news.

Now for some good news...

Over the years, NYC Pain MD has treated countless knee pain sufferers. And in that time have been able to constantly improve.

And we have come up with a treatment formula that we have found works best and helps the most patients.

This formula has reduced or even eliminated the pain in many. Some were scheduled for knee replacement surgery and felt good enough to cancel their surgery.

It’s amazing when patients who were once in excruciating pain... start feeling better. And start walking again. And playing golf. Or tennis. And finally getting their lives back.

Especially when they had gone to other doctors and tried so many other things.

So many had given up hope.

Sound familiar? If it does... check this out...

The Treatment Formula

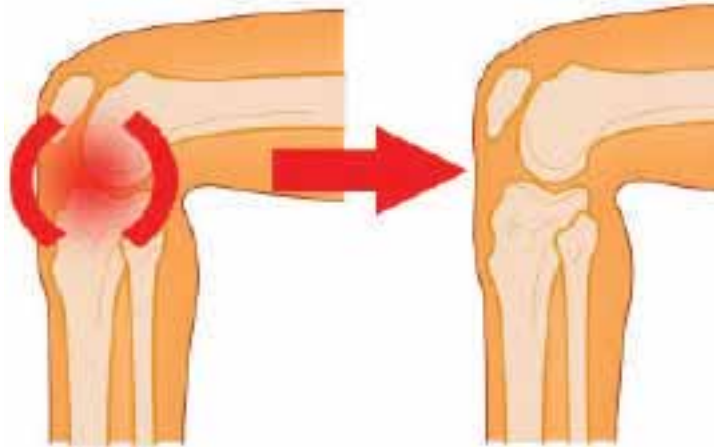

While I can’t give you the entire treatment formula here (there is not enough space and WAY too complicated) I can give you the basics. And more important... I can tell you what it might be able to do for YOU.

The first and most important part of the formula is: PATIENT SELECTION.

This means, NYC Pain MD has a detailed screening process to tell who is most likely to be helped by their treatments... and who is not.

If you qualify, you have the opportunity to move forward and experience the worldclass treatments that NYC Pain MD offers.

If you do not, NYC Pain MD will tell you what they think your best options are and help you find the right doctor for you.

NYC Pain MD “Treatment Formula” A protocol of advanced medical treatments that has already helped thousands.

If you qualify, NYC Pain MD offers some of the most advanced medical treatments available today all using the most advanced imaging technology including:

- Viscosupplementation (gel injections)
- Platelet Rich Plasma (PRP)
- Stem Cell Therapy (Lipogems)
- Genicular Knee Block
- And more.

Once again, there is not enough space to go into detail about all these procedures... but here are some things you MUST KNOW...

Viscosupplementation is where a doctor introduces a gel-like medicine directly into the joint space. This helps to lubricate the joints often relieving some, most or even all of your pain. Results can last for 6 months to several years.

Many have had these treatments without good results. However, NYC Pain MD feels this is because doctors often do these “gel injections” without advanced imaging to guide them. Research shows they will often miss the joint. If the joint is missed... it is impossible for the treatment to work.

NYC Pain MD has spared no expense and used advanced imaging to guide the injections assuring the medicine gets into the joint. We frequently get results when this treatment was a failure done elsewhere.

The second thing you must know is... our treatment plans are custom made for every patient. And we have all these treatments offered in the same place. Many times you will get the best results from multiple treatments. At NYC Pain MD your doctors will all be there and will all know each other and you and your case. They work together and give you the best treatments and care without you having to go anywhere else.

The ability to select the right patients and then have the potential to give them any or all of these treatments... with all the necessary medical technology... under one roof... has allowed NYC Pain MD to get better results than they thought possible.

Here’s What You Should Do Next

If you suffer with knee pain... and any of this made sense to you... NYC Pain MD would like to offer you a No-cost screening. That screening is the first step in our “Treatment Formula.”

You will get to see a doctor and ask any questions you have. Your doctor will take the first steps to see if you qualify for treatments and give you recommendations.

The best thing is... you will finally get direction. You will know what’s going on and what is your best course of action... step-by-step. The treatments will be explained in detail and you will breathe a big sigh of relief finally knowing what’s going on and what can or cannot be done.

There is so much we want to say to help you... but I’m out of space. Give us a call at 877-296-6310 and take the first step. That step is free without obligation.

Tensions high as Trump visits Pittsburgh after synagogue shooting

Blame, rage and political attacks abound after a mass shooting in a Pittsburgh synagogue that resulted in the deaths of 11 worshippers.

SAM NEWHOUSE
sam.newhouse@metro.us

President Donald Trump and first lady Melania Trump will visit Pittsburgh's Squirrel Hill neighborhood on Tuesday to share their sympathies with the community around the Tree of Life synagogue after 11 worshippers were killed during a Shabbat service on Saturday.

But some community members say they don't want Trump there. Eleven Jewish leaders with the Pittsburgh chapter of Bend the Arc, a progressive Jewish group, signed a letter telling Trump to stay away unless he denounces "white nationalism."

"[Saturday's] violence is the direct culmination of your influence," they wrote.

Trump, for his part, has denounced the actions of shooter Robert Bowers, 46, who killed 11 and wounded six including four police officers.

"Anti-Semitism is a plague to humanity and it is responsible for many of the worst horrors in human history," said Trump's press secretary Sarah Huckabee Sanders at a media briefing on Tuesday. "The president cherishes the American Jewish community for everything it stands for and contributes to our country. He adores Jewish-Americans as part of his own family — the president is the grandfather of several Jewish grandchildren, his daughter is a Jewish-American, and his son-in-law is a descendant of Holocaust survivors."

But since he took office, many have targeted Trump's belligerence on the political stage and toward groups like Democrats and undocumented immigrants as hateful rhetoric that they say foments real-life violence — such as the recent mailing of pipe bombs to many prominent Democrats.

Bowers reportedly posted on the now-shuttered social media platform Gab that he would target Jews due to his rage over a Jewish-oriented nonprofit's support for Latino immigrants currently participating in a so-called caravan to the U.S. — a movement Trump and other conservatives have harshly attacked.

"HIAS likes to bring invaders in that kill our people," Bowers reportedly said before the shooting, referring to the group formerly known as Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society before formally changing its name to HIAS. "I can't sit by and watch my people get slaughtered. Screw your optics, I'm going in."

But on social media, conservatives and Republicans have condemned the attacks, noting that the shooter also called Trump in online postings a "globalist" and said he did not vote for Trump.

"This president has normalized hate since his campaign, so for people to place blame on him for the speech and incitement of violence is legitimate," said Shira Goodman, executive director of CeaseFire PA.

Bowers used a modified AR-15, which CeaseFire, which has lobbied for years for stricter guns laws in the U.S., called the "mass shooter's weapon of choice."

The shooting came barely five days after a new Holocaust memorial opened in Center City, Philadelphia.

The Medical Director of urology is David Shusterman, MD. Dr. Shusterman is a board certified urologist who specializes in state of the art compassionate kidney stone treatment.

Safe, effective ways to treat kidney stones

Anyone who has ever suffered from kidney stones knows just how painful it can be. It's little wonder that more than half a million people go to the emergency room for kidney stone problems every year, according to the National Kidney Foundation.

So what are kidney stones? They're essentially hard mineral deposits that form inside the kidneys. When the fluid in urine is unable to break them down, they'll pass through the ureter and bladder—which is generally a painful process. There's a wealth of anecdotal reports likening kidney stone pain to that of childbirth. The truth is that no two cases are alike, but early diagnosis is critical when it comes to getting ahead of it. Many times, this comes down to understanding the specific risk factors that might make you more likely to develop kidney stones. Family history, frequent dehydration, certain dietary issues, and obesity are all on the list. Board Certified Urologist Dr. David Shusterman of NY Urology takes a proactive approach. Thanks to a mix of preventative medicine and some simple lifestyle changes, you may be able to prevent kidney stones before they ever develop.

If a kidney stone is already in motion, Dr. Shusterman's expert team can quickly identify it using ultrasound imaging, then get things moving with innovative treatment options that have made NY Urology a nationally recognized leader in the field. He leads with holistic medicine with the goal being to break down kidney stones so that they can pass as naturally and easily as possible. NY Urology provides a cutting-edge, noninvasive treatment called extracorporeal shock wave lithotripsy (ESWL), which relies on sound waves to break apart the stones via focused vibrations.

The in-office procedure is completely safe, and recovery is typically pretty swift.

Another option is placing something called a nephrostomy tube into the kidneys. This plastic catheter essentially lets urine drain directly from the kidneys during the treatment process. The result is near-immediate pain relief because you're eliminating backed-up urine and helping things flow more easily. A ureteral stent works in much the same way, bolstering the body's ability to drain urine and, in turn, safely encouraging the natural healing process. The soft plastic stent is temporarily placed directly into the ureter to help urine flow more freely. When ureters are blocked up by kidney stones, pain and discomfort are on the horizon. Stents open these passages.

When all else fails, NY Urology also specializes in minimally invasive surgery using a device called a ureteroscopy to eliminate painful, stubborn kidney stones. Making its way through the urethra and bladder, and into the ureter, the device zeros in on the kidney stone and swiftly removes it. The best part is that it's a fairly straightforward outpatient procedure that requires no incisions. In extreme situations where the stone is too large to remove with a ureteroscopy, Dr. Shusterman may call on a more in-depth procedure that involves a small incision in the back. The upside here is that the success rate is high, helping patients safely get rid of large kidney stones in one fell swoop.

Whether you're looking to prevent kidney stones or address one that's already wreaking havoc, NY Urology is your best resource. Book an appointment today with Dr. Shusterman, located at 800 Second Avenue on the corner of 42nd Street. American sisters sue USA Gymnastics over sex abuse scandal Tasha and Jordan Schwikert claimed at a news conference they were victims of Larry Nassar.

Two former USA Gymnastics national team members on Monday filed civil lawsuits against the organization, disgraced ex-team doctor Larry Nassar, and the U.S. Olympic Committee for failing to prevent sexual assault of young women in their care.

Tasha Schwikert, 33, who won a bronze medal at the 2000 Sydney Olympics, and her sister Jordan, 32, described themselves as Nassar victims during a news conference at a Los Angeles law firm.

The complaint, filed in the Los Angeles County Superior Court, seeks to hold the defendants accountable, alleging the Schwikerts were referred to Nassar for medical treatment, "even though it knew or should have known of Nassar's sexual abuse and could have prevented it by taking sexual abuse allegations seriously and maintaining a culture of accountability and transparency."

Nassar was sentenced in February to up to 125 years in prison after some 200 women, including Olympians, testified about decades of abuse at his hands.

USA Gymnastics said in a statement it was sorry the Schwikerts were abused by Nassar and that it is working to make changes to ensure that athlete safety and well-being remains at the forefront of its work but otherwise would not comment on pending litigation.

"We are focused on fostering an environment that is safe, positive and encouraging for athletes and all members," said USA Gymnastics.

"I am outraged at watching what's been happening at USA Gymnastics. It's like watching a perpetual circus of horrors."

Tasha Schwikert

The USOC did not respond when asked to comment on the lawsuit.

The lawsuit alleges USA Gymnastics "kept a secret file of sexual abuse allegations and enabled a culture of psychological and physical abuse that kept young girls," including the Schwikert sisters, silent.

According to the complaint, the "defendants willfully refused to notify, give adequate warning and implement appropriate safeguards" to protect the young gymnasts under their supervision.

"I am outraged at watching what's been happening at USA Gymnastics. It's like watching a perpetual circus of horrors," Tasha told reporters.

According to a statement released on behalf of the sisters, the lawsuits are the first related to the Nassar scandal to seek damages under the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act, "as each of these defendants engaged in a pattern of racketeering activity including sexual exploitation, abuse, and trafficking of minors and conspiracy to commit such acts."

In addition, the complaint alleges that the USOC threatened to decertify USA Gymnastics as the sport's national governing body for denying "due process" to convicted child sex abusers whom it placed on a ban list. REUTERS

Indonesian plane crashes into sea, all 189 on board feared dead

At least 23 government officials were onboard Lion Air Flight JT610.

An Indonesian airliner crashed into the sea on Monday, with the likely loss of all 189 people on board, as it tried to return to Jakarta minutes after takeoff.

Lion Air Flight JT610, an almost new Boeing 737 MAX 8, was en route from the capital to Pangkal Pinang, center of the Bangka-Belitung tin mining region. Rescue officials said they had recovered human remains from the crash site, about 9 miles off the coast.

Indonesia is one of the world's fastest-growing aviation markets, but its safety record is patchy. If all aboard have died, the crash will be its second-worst air disaster since 1997, industry experts said.

The pilot had asked to return to base (RTB) shortly after takeoff. It lost contact with ground staff after 13 minutes.

"An RTB was requested and had been approved but we're still trying to figure out the reason," Soerjanto Tjahjono, head of Indonesia's transport safety committee, told reporters, referring to the pilot's request.

"We hope the black box is not far from the main wreckage so it can be found soon," he said, referring to the cockpit voice recorder and flight data recorder.

Search and rescue agency head Muhammad Syaigi told a news conference that no distress signal had been received from the aircraft's emergency transmitter.

Yusuf Latief, spokesman for the national search and rescue agency, said there were likely no survivors.

At least 23 government officials, four employees of state tin miner PT Timah and three employees of a Timah subsidiary were on the plane. A Lion Air official said one Italian passenger and an Indian pilot were also on board.

Speaking at a hospital, a tearful Finance Minister Sri Mulyani Indrawati paid tribute to the 21 officials from her ministry on the doomed flight who she said "died doing their duty."

Edward Sirait, chief executive of Lion Air Group, told reporters the aircraft had had a technical problem on a flight from the resort island of Bali to Jakarta but it had been "resolved according to procedure."

Sirait declined to specify the nature of the issue but said none of its other aircraft of that model had the same problem. Lion had operated 11 Boeing 737 MAX 8s and it had no plan to ground the rest of them, he said.

The accident is the first to be reported involving the widely sold Boeing 737 MAX, an updated, more fuel-efficient version of the manufacturer's workhorse single-aisle jet.

Privately owned Lion Air said the aircraft had been in operation since August and was airworthy, with its pilot and co-pilot together having accumulated 11,000 hours of flying time.

On tarpaulins at Jakarta's port, officers laid out items retrieved from the sea ranging from oxygen bottles to personal belongings such as wallets, a mobile phone, cash and backpacks.

Authorities told Metro TV that 24 bags containing body parts had been taken to a hospital for identification, with more expected overnight.

A witness in the Karawang district nearest to the crash site said he heard an explosion from the beach. REUTERS

City launches #PeaceNYC campaign to help end gun violence

For the past year, the Office to Prevent Gun Violence has been on the front lines in the 17 neighborhoods across the five boroughs that account for more than half of the city's gun violence.

OPGV uses a community-based approach to empower and connect those areas and provide support services for residents "that once were part of gun culture and utilize them as a vehicle to get to young people who may be engaged in current violence," Executive Director Eric Cumberbatch said.

Some of those residents are now publicly joining the fight to end gun violence in the city thanks to the #PeaceNYC social media campaign, which launches this week and urges all New Yorkers to participate.

"We really felt what was a key missing component in addressing gun violence is the youth voice, the voice of the people that are most impacted by violence," Cumberbatch explained. "What we wanted to do was really ensure that the messaging was coming from young people, peer-to-peer, that the representation reflects the truth and honesty in community."

New Yorkers can participate in the #PeaceNYC movement by creating their own poster at peace-nyc.org. Just upload a photo, give your name and borough, and download and share it to social media using the hashtag.

"Most people are looking for opportunities to share their stories," Cumberbatch said. "They want to hear that their loved ones matter, loved ones that they may have lost to gun violence, and they also want to play a role in preventing someone else from losing a loved one."

Having worked closely with those who have been most affected by gun violence in New York City, Cumberbatch has "always believed that the communities we work in have more strengths than weaknesses and have organically and historically healed themselves," he said. "Our role here in government is to lift those efforts to the forefront, resource them and help align them operationally so that [those] neighborhoods could thrive just like every other neighborhood in New York City." NIKKI M. BRIEF

Ninth child dies in deadly viral outbreak in New Jersey

A ninth child died over the weekend in a deadly viral outbreak at a New Jersey rehabilitation center where a total of 25 young patients with compromised immune systems have been confirmed with adenovirus infections, state health officials said.

The death on Sunday at Wanaque Center for Nursing and Rehabilitation in Haskell, New Jersey, was reported over the weekend by the New Jersey

Department of Health.

"These children were all largely ventilator dependent and immuno-compromised," said NJDOH rep Donna Leusner.

Adenoviruses frequently cause mild to severe illness with cold-like symptoms, particularly in young children.

The infection can cause other illnesses, including pneumonia, diarrhea and bronchitis, the department said.

An eighth child's death on Friday afternoon was associated with the outbreak, Leusner said.

The nine children who died in the outbreak that began Sept. 26 range in age from toddler to young adult, with most of them under age 18. The most recent outbreak of the illness at the facility, about 32 miles northwest of New York City, was Oct. 22.

The facility, which includes a pediatric center, has been instructed not to admit new patients until the outbreak ends, the department said.

The strain of adenovirus is associated with communal living arrangements, it said.

"We are working every day to ensure all infection control protocols are continuously followed and closely monitoring the situation at the facility," Health Commissioner Dr. Shreef Elnahal said in a statement.

Health officials found minor hand-washing deficiencies at the facility during visits last week, and have been working with the center on infection-control issues, the health department said. REUTERS

Understanding diabetes

You have medical questions? We have answers. Metro is teaming up with the experts at the esteemed Mt. Sinai hospital to provide answers to New Yorkers' most pressing medical concerns. Send us an email at askmtnsinai@metro.us. We'll select one question and publish an answer every other week.

November starts this month, and brings with it National Diabetes Awareness Month. According to the American Diabetes

ISTOCK

Association, in 2015, 30.3 million Americans, or 9.4% of the population, had diabetes. To understand more about the condition, we spoke with Dr. Grenye O'Malley and Dr. Deena Adimoolam, both assistant professors of medicine, endocrinology, diabetes and bone disease at the Icahn School of Medicine at Mount Sinai.

What's the difference between Type 1 and Type 2 diabetes?

Dr. O'Malley: Your pancreas makes insulin which then tells your other organs how to adjust how much sugar is in your blood. In Type 1 diabetes, the pancreas is not making any insulin. This is usually due to an autoimmune process where your body makes antibodies and attacks the pancreas. People with Type 1 diabetes need to give themselves insulin since they are not making it themselves. Type 2 diabetes is due to the other organs not listening to the insulin — we call this insulin resistance. The pancreas tries to make more insulin to overcome the resistance, but eventually, it cannot make enough. Type 2 diabetes can be managed by eating fewer carbohydrates and losing weight. The pills we use to treat Type 2 diabetes can tell the pancreas to make more insulin or affect how the other organs are managing the sugar in the blood. Some people with Type 2 diabetes need extra insulin to help keep their sugars at goal. Type 1 diabetes used to be called juvenile diabetes, however, it can be diagnosed in adulthood, and Type 2 diabetes rates in children are rising, so people at any age can get either type.

GET IN. GET OUT.
GET ON YOUR WAY.

What are the essential health check-ups for people at risk, and for people who have a diagnosis?

Dr. O'Malley: People are at risk of Type 2 diabetes if they have family members with diabetes, have a history of gestational diabetes, have other hormone disorders such as polycystic ovarian syndrome, or are overweight or obese. If you are at risk, your doctor can check your blood to see what your blood sugar is on the day of your visit. Your doctor can also do a blood test which gives us an estimation of what blood sugar has been for the past 3 months. This is called a hemoglobin A1C.

For people who have diabetes, the main goal is to prevent high sugars from hurting your other organs. We check how well the kidneys are doing through urine and blood tests. You should also have periodic examinations of your feet and eyes. Since diabetes can affect your heart, we make sure that your blood pressure and cholesterol are doing well. If you have Type 1 diabetes, we also check to see if you have other conditions that are also autoimmune.

What are some common misconceptions about diabetes?

Dr. Adimoolam: There are many misconceptions about diabetes risk factors, symptoms, healthy foods and more that could affect how diabetes patients take care of themselves. Where to start, there are too many to name. But the one I hate the most is "there is no cure for Type 2 diabetes." Type 2 diabetes is a progressive disease, and most people with it eventually need insulin. By using insulin to keep their diabetes in good control, people with Type 2 can often avoid complications and lead a healthy life.

Obesity is a risk factor, but can non-obese people develop diabetes?

Dr. Adimoolam: Yes. There are many different types of diabetes that can develop in non-obese patients. Non-obese people can develop Type 2 diabetes due to genetics, certain gene mutations, medications (like steroids) and other medical conditions (especially those that significantly damage the pancreas, like cystic fibrosis).

What can people who have a diagnosis do to manage their diabetes well?

Dr. Adimoolam: Seek medical attention right away once a diagnosis is made. Even prediabetes needs to be taken seriously. There are too many people that find out they are "borderline" diabetic and never seek treatment or help because they think it will go away or it's not serious enough. There is a potential to cure Type 2 diabetes if treated early. Get the help that you need by visiting your doctor. Treatment for diabetes requires keeping close watch over your blood sugar levels with a combination of medications, exercise and diet. Each plan is tailored for the person and can be adjusted based on what you eat and how much you exercise, as well as for times of stress and illness. SHEILA DOUGHERTY

Guster looks into the future on new album 'Look Alive'

We talked with songwriter Ryan Miller about the band's bold new direction on their striking eighth album.

patrick.king@metro.us

The long-running indie-rock band Guster have come a long way from their earliest days of playing as a three-piece band in coffee shops. Back then, they were defined as much by the songwriting talents of lead singers Ryan Miller and Adam Gardner as they were by the thunderous hand-drumming of Brian Rosenworcel. The band will release their eighth record, "Look Alive," on Jan. 18, and from the sounds of the record's first two singles — "Hard Times" and "Don't Go" — it seems as though the band will be entering a completely new sonic territory than what most fans are used to. We caught up with Ryan Miller to talk about this new direction for the band ahead of their show at Jersey City's White Eagle Hall this Thursday.

You're about to release your eighth studio album, "Look Alive." It has a bigger sound than fans are used to. With your last record you hinted at this when working with the late, great Richard Swift. What was the approach to writing and recording this time?

I think that we think about things in terms of fidelity, too. Whereas with Swift, the thing that he did really well with Foxygen, Damien Jurado and his own records was that they had this crazy vibe but they weren't really audiophile records by a long shot. I never thought that I could put on a Swift record and feel like it was something you could tune your PA to. That's what we loved about him and what we loved about the process. There were a lot of first takes and a lot of, "Let's go record this fast." That informed so much about how we approached it.

Actually, we recorded this record pretty quickly as well. This new record is a nine-song record and eight of the songs were recorded with Leo Abrahams. He was an equally gigantic force in the record. Obviously, we've developed a lot as songwriters and sonic people. But, it was such a strong mind-meld with Leo, pretty much right from the beginning.

It feels like your band has a lot in common with some of the more rewarding bands in alternative rock — like Low and Wilco — where you started with a very minimal setup and have expanded your sound over the years. Is that always the plan with each new album?

I don't really think of it in terms of layering stuff. But I think it was very cognizant to kind of explore sonically, dynamically, and rhythmically things that were changing from record to record.

I think if you look at a band like Low or Wilco, you can put them into eras. I feel like we are going to make more records with Leo. That didn't really ever happen with when we worked with Swift. We thought it was great and that we would work together in other capacities. But, I feel like this thing that we stumbled into with Leo feels like something we are going to be pursuing and trying to better. So, I feel like this is a really hard chapter for our band, starting with this record.

I really don't know how to talk about the record yet...We're so close to it [the release date]! But in playing it for friends, it all feels very confident to me. It feels very fearless in a lot of ways...It's very exciting for us in a different way than making the Swift album was exciting for us.

The new Big Apple Circus wanted to attract a larger audience — and it's succeeded.

eva.kis@metro.us

If you don't have kids, you probably haven't checked out the Big Apple Circus. A New York institution for 41 years, it's changed hands and gotten a major makeover aimed at attracting millennials — and it's worked.

It's rare to feel like you're truly getting a VIP experience in this city, but that's what awaits beneath the first big top of the night you'll enter. The evening's entertainment begins an hour before the show inside a traditional Dutch spiegel tent, a charming old-world wooden structure where performers rove through the audience telling your fortune in a crystal ball or spinning you around onstage, plus several cute circus photo ops.

You'll be feeling just silly enough to indulge in all of it thanks to new themed cocktails by mixology star Pam Wiznitzer, tops among them the Pop It Like It's Hot (though for Instagram purposes, the Big Apple served in a balloon dog wins). Having the cocktails pre-batched and three bartenders on hand makes service incredibly fast, a welcome change from the long lines for wine and beer (still available in the general welcome/concessions tent, where non-VIP patrons can hang out before the performance). While the spiegel tent is just for VIPs at the start of the show, everyone is welcome to enjoy a drink afterward.

A performer inside the spiegel tent.

Many of the performers in the ring are new, too. Mark Gindick and Adam Kuchler make for a perfect double act as the clown "hosts" of the evening, keeping the comedy at a perfect pitch for both adults and kids. The Big Apple Circus is known for its intimacy, with a single ring where no seat is more than 50 feet from the stage, which also means the audience shares in every gasp and laugh.

Among the new performers — and there are many — the stars are Valeriy Sychev and Malvina Abakarova, whose aerial ballet act, Desire of Flight, is sensual without being racy and breathtakingly daring. They rise all the way to the ceiling on just two handheld straps and no net, receiving a well-earned standing ovation from the crowd. For creativity, horizontal juggler Victor Moiseev, making his first appearance in the U.S., is an utter delight.

The two-hour show (with a 20-minute intermission for refills of whatever you fancy midway through) zips along, ending almost too soon. In its 41st year, the Big Apple Circus has certainly learned the trick to charming audiences of all ages.

The Big Apple Circus is open now through Jan. 27, 2019 at Damrosch Park, 60 Lincoln Center Plaza. Tickets are $29-$80; bigapplecircus.com

VIPs start the show with new circus-themed cocktails by Pamela Wiznitzer.

Constance Zimmer on the role of journalism in 'House of Cards' season 6

The actress opens up about making sure "journalists weren't mad" at her.

ANDREW HUSBAND
letters@metro.us

Following the murder of Zoe Barnes (Kate Mara) on "House of Cards," fellow reporter Janine Skorsky (Constance Zimmer) fled Washington, D.C. in the hopes of avoiding Frank Underwood's (Kevin Spacey) increasingly dangerous influence. The cynical and oftentimes bitter print journalist was suddenly scared into submission, and her caution has lasted for many seasons.

Come season 6, however, viewers will find a more determined and less afraid Skorsky following a new story, one that ultimately brings her back home.

"I definitely think it is what drives her," Zimmer tells Metro of her character's outlook on the world. "She can't be complacent. She can't take things at face value. And that is definitely what keeps her going now."

"It's crazy how the role of a journalist has changed so much in the last five years," she continues. She's not wrong, either, for in an age when a presidential administration regularly piles the blame for so many of the country's problems on the "fake news media," Zimmer believes now more than ever that Skorsky should be doing right by working journalists.

a matter of when I would come back and fight."

And that is precisely what the "UnREAL" and "BoJack Horseman" actress has been doing for the past few years on "House of Cards." Yes, Skorsky fled in the aftermath of Barnes' murder, and yes, she's spent most of the previous seasons living (and hiding) in the Ithaca, New York area. But now that Frank is dead and Claire Underwood (Robyn Wright) is president, she's coming back for one last story.

"My favorite thing on every single red carpet I ever did, was that every single journalist would say, 'Please just tell me that Janine is still alive!' I would always tell them that she was still alive and that there was still hope. With hope, we can get answers. I've always stood by that, so I'm really excited now that she's back doing her thing this season, with new challenges."

Among those challenges: wealthy Shepherd siblings Bill and Annette, played by Greg Kinnear and Diane Lane. As audiences will find out on Friday, the pair proves to be one of the nastier thorns in Claire's side now that she's in the White House. But never fear, because Skorsky is on the case. But will she meet a fate like Barnes before her, or live to tell the tale?

"The biggest challenge at first was outlasting Zoe, which was never, ever part of the original story," says Zimmer. "So when Janine outlasted Zoe, I was like, 'Where does that get us?'"

The sixth and final season of "House of Cards" streams Friday on Netflix.

A Sweet treat for Halloween

What's the magical phrase for getting something good to eat this time of year? We're thinking it goes something like, "Trick or treat!" No doubt, the Halloween season offers plenty of tricks, but there are plenty of treats, too. You just have to know where to look — and what to bake! Luckily, we have a Halloween-inspired delight that's pre-bubbling in our creative cauldron. Sorry, make that creative kitchen — we're not witches. Or are we? KATELYN CHEF

WITCH FINGERS

Witch fingers or pretzel rods drizzled with melted chocolate and almonds? You decide.

Ingredients

- 28 blanched almonds
- 1 tube black gel food coloring
- 14 large pretzel rods
- 12 oz. bright-green candy coating

Recipe

- Use a small food-safe paintbrush to paint the top of each almond with black gel food coloring. (Wear food-safe gloves if you want to avoid getting your fingertips dyed black as well.)
- Set aside on waxed paper or parchment paper to dry while you prepare the rest of the recipe.
- Break or cut each pretzel rod in half.
- Place the green candy coating in a small but deep microwave-safe bowl (or heatproof cup) and microwave in 30-second increments,

Enjoy some sweet treats for Halloween with these fun recipes from The Spruce Eats. PROVIDED stirring after every 30 seconds to prevent overheating and burning. Stir and heat until the candy coating is completely melted and smooth.

-Holding a pretzel rod by the unbroken end, dip it in the green coating until almost all of it is covered, leaving about a 1/2-inch section undipped at the top where you are holding it.

-Place the dipped pretzel on the same lined baking sheet you used to dry the black candy-coated almond nails and immediately press one of them on the tip of the pretzel rod that is coated in green candy coating.

-Continue to dip more pretzels and, while you do, keep an eye on the already-dipped pretzels. When the coating has started to dry and is mostly matte but not completely hard, it's time to add the wrinkles for the knuckles.

-Take a toothpick and hold it perpendicular to the pretzels. Gently roll it across the top to add wrinkles. Make two sets — one set near the fingernail, and one set about halfway down the finger. This will make your witch finger super realistic-looking. If the coating is too melted and sticky when you try, give it a few more minutes to set before trying again. -After all the pretzels have been dipped and decorated, refrigerate the tray for 10 minutes to set the coating completely. After that, the witch fingers can be served on a party tray or standing upright in a mason jar.

Is benching Manning for Lauletta a good idea for Giants?

A quarterback change is on the horizon for the Giants, but should it happen now?

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

While it might not have been thought possible, things have gone from bad to worse for the New York Giants and veteran quarterback Eli Manning.

A 20-13 Week 8 loss to the Washington Redskins has dropped the Giants to 1-7 on the season as the franchise seemingly plays out the remainder of the 2018 schedule before sweeping changes come down through the locker room.

Among the most highly anticipated is the eventual benching — and even departure — of Manning, who completed 30-of-47 passes for 316 yards, one touchdown, and two interceptions. Most notably, he was sacked seven times by the Redskins' defense, a combination of a horrendous offensive line and his lack of mobility combining to doom the Giants' offense to another sub-20-point effort. It's already the fifth time this season that the Giants have not been able to score 20 or more points, and it all comes down to the inept passing game.

Waiting in the wings is rookie quarterback Kyle Lauletta, a University of Richmond product who was named Senior Bowl MVP and could at least offer a different look under center for the Giants.

He's far more mobile than Manning and the move could spark a bit more fight in an offense that has done its fair share of rolling over this year.

Head coach Pat Shurmur, whose play calling hasn't necessarily helped Manning and Co. much either, did allude to the slight possibility of Lauletta stepping in for the 37-year-old after the team's bye week.

"No, I don't want to go there," Shurmur said. "I'm not going to tease that. I just want to look at everything and see what we have to do moving forward."

Getting Lauletta suited up and in an actual game come Week 10 would provide the Giants with an extended look at what they have in the rookie. If it becomes overwhelmingly obvious that he is unable to show the poise and skill set needed to succeed in the NFL, management could focus on acquiring a franchise quarterback this offseason whether it's on the market or at the draft.

The problem with thrusting Lauletta into the starting role is that he is still going to be facing the same problems Manning has seen over the last two years.

For a rookie who has never seen regular-season game action, Lauletta will be facing merciless pass rushes that provide a constant pressure in his face. Through just eight games this year, Manning has been sacked 31 times. He was sacked 31 times all of last year and is on pace to see his previous record of 39 sacks get crushed in 2018.

While Lauletta might be able to extend the play, throwing an inexperienced arm into that kind of situation is not only unfair, but it could shell-shock the 22-year-old. There is no way the Giants could get a legitimate read on what they have if he is unable to get any time in the pocket and show off his arm.

So it might be logical just to let Manning play out the majority of the second half of the season and only turn to Lauletta in the final few games. If the organization sees something promising in him, they can spend the offseason overhauling the offensive line in hopes that the offense can become a threat once more.

Yanks' interest in Harper, Machado fading

The latest on the Yankees' standing with Major League Baseball's top free agents.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

So begins a nauseating offseason for the New York Yankees as the Boston Red Sox celebrate their ninth World Series title in franchise history.

After watching their division rivals celebrate an ALDS victory on their own field before winning it all, the 100-win Yankees will be looking for the final pieces of a championship puzzle this winter.

Given their big-market standing, their financial capabilities and their tradition of winning, New York is expected to be in the running for the game's best available players, whether it be on the trade market or in free agency.

However, this year's free agency class might be the best one Major League Baseball has seen in quite some time as both Bryce Harper and Manny Machado are available, which provides the possibility of one or both of these talents winding up in the Bronx.

After seven seasons with the Washington Nationals that didn't even provide a single playoff series win, Harper is on the verge of becoming the richest man in baseball. The 2015 National League MVP and seven-time All-Star is coming off a down season that still yielded 34 home runs and 100 RBI despite batting just .249. He's slashing .276/.388/.512 during his career with 162-game averages of 32 home runs and 91 RBI.

numbers get even better thanks to a short porch in right field.

Not far behind Harper in terms of expected money will be Machado, who might have lost a bit on his next deal after his antics during the playoffs this year with the Los Angeles Dodgers. Too often was the shortstop, who is also just 26, at the center of controversy, whether it was regarding his lack of hustle or unsportsmanlike conduct on the base paths.

Still, this is a player coming off a career year in which he combined to bat .297 with 37 home runs and 107 RBI with the Baltimore Orioles and Dodgers.

With Brett Gardner on the way out and Didi Gregorius recovering from an elbow injury for a good chunk of the 2019 season, the Yankees do have openings for either player, but it doesn't sound like they want them.

SNY's Andy Martino reported on Monday morning that Harper is not a part of the team's offseason plans. It's been known since the end of the ALDS that the Yankees will try and bring back Andrew McCutchen on a cheaper contract to hold down the left-field spot.

As for Machado, Martino revealed that interest from the Yankees' baseball operations staff has significantly decreased after his actions during the playoffs. It's a sudden change of tune for a franchise that went for Machado last winter and at the 2018 trade deadline.

It doesn't mean that both players are ruled out of the Yankees' plans, especially if ownership sees it vital for the organization to acquire at least one of these players. However, at the moment, it doesn't look likely.
